

NWAC

2021/2022

ANNUAL REPORT

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

The 2021-22 winter was another challenging year in the mountains, for NWAC, and for the world as we evolved our response to the ever-changing nature in the mountains coupled with a pandemic response. Yet again, we have gained wisdom coming out of the season and gratitude for our team and the growing community we serve.

Our season got off to a slow—and sad—start and then turned on strong and peaking with a remarkable avalanche cycle the first week of January. During the first week of forecasting in December, we experienced our one avalanche fatality of the season outside of Crystal Mountain ski area. We offer our deepest condolences to the family and communities affected by this tragedy. Before this weekend, there had barely been enough snow in our region to produce an avalanche. After the new year, we experienced an extraordinary weather cycle that pushed the danger to Extreme in several of our zones. This cycle brought historic snowfall to the east side of the Cascades with avalanches down into lower elevations and sagebrush country, along with significant roof avalanches and many near misses. Several highway paths had a near-historic or a historic number of avalanches run, and all three of our mountain passes were closed for days.

Our trajectory of community-supported growth has allowed us to evolve our forecasting program to better meet the needs of our users. This season we conducted 93 additional field days—a 43% increase over the prior season! These field days give us a better understanding of the snowpack and a more accurate forecast. Alongside increasing field days, we were able to deliver on our goal of increasing forecaster capacity. With the support of the USFS, and through a competitive process, we are fortunate to have Katie Warren join the team as an avalanche specialist.

Finally, the Northwest Avalanche Center would not be possible without the dedicated staff, supporting partners, and driven community members. They are truly the heart of NWAC and allow hundreds of thousands of people to travel safely in the mountains. We'd like to extend a warm thank you to everyone involved and let you know that we are busy preparing for another season as your avalanche center.

We are looking forward to seeing you all in the mountains!

With gratitude,

Scott Schell,
Executive Director

Dennis D'Amico,
Forecast Director

SEASON SUMMARY

While many here in the Pacific Northwest may remember the 2021-22 season for its prolonged mid-winter stretches of limited snowfall, this by no means tells the story. In truth, the season saw periods of banner precipitation, marked by enormous region-wide avalanche cycles, and a wintery spring that further built the season's snowpack well into May.

At NWAC, we continued to grow our staff, expanding our capabilities in programming and forecasting. This allowed us to widen our reach to underserved and underrepresented communities both demographically and geographically. Ultimately, the success of this winter continues to emphasize the incredible support of our community and partners here in the Northwest.

With yet another busy winter in the books, we are continually reminded that the strength of our operation depends on our community. Our professional partners provide consistent and reliable information, and the ever-growing recreating public support NWAC through membership, field reports, and volunteer hours. Without the efforts of individuals and operations working together, we could not hope to meet our mission here in the PNW to increase avalanche awareness, reduce avalanche impacts, and equip the community with mountain weather and avalanche forecasts, education, and data.

FORECASTING OPERATIONS

Early season snowfall in October and the promise of another la Niña winter left most backcountry travelers eager and optimistic. Sadly, a series of warm atmospheric rivers in November would wash away these hopes. Instead, our season wouldn't start until December 9th. In typical Northwest fashion, a pair of impressive winter storms built the snowpack seemingly overnight and set the tone for what would become almost a month straight of near-daily precipitation. Sadly, the kick-off to the winter also brought with it a major avalanche accident, where six backcountry tourers were caught and carried. Three members were fully buried, and one, tragically, did not survive. This accident highlighted many points, but the influence of terrain traps and well-executed companion rescue rose to the top.

FORECASTING OPERATIONS CONTINUED

As 2021 drew to a close, the mountains were in the full grip of winter. Many locations had already received 150+ inches of snow over the preceding weeks. And, while avalanche conditions typically hinged on the next storm, several weak layers lingered in the snowpack. A series of storms from January 3rd-9th would bring these problems to a head and cause one of the most widespread avalanche cycles in recent memory. Over the course of a few days, Snoqualmie Pass (3000') would receive 9.1 inches of water with warming temperatures. The city of Leavenworth picked up 40+ inches of snow, the most the town had seen in one storm in nearly 30 years. Not surprisingly avalanches abound. The North Central Region WSDOT (including Stevens Pass) crew recorded 376 avalanches during this period that blocked at least part of a roadway. All of the Cascade Passes closed for at least four days, with White Pass (US 12) remaining closed for an impressive eight days. While road closures are common in the Cascades, this event stood out for its region-wide and long-lasting nature. In the aftermath, backcountry travelers discovered numerous D3 slides that expanded natural trim lines, and several D4 slides that removed sections of forest.

Like much of the West, following this cycle, we entered a period of relatively warm and dry weather. While occasional storms passed through the region, we slowly watched our snowpack dwindle. This all changed the last week of March when the storm track returned to the PNW. What were once below-average season totals, quickly flipped, with many monitoring sites reaching 110 percent of average by April 15th. Even into late May, we remained in a very wintery weather pattern with snow continuing to fall at mid and upper elevations.

EDUCATION & OUTREACH

This season brought us many hard decisions on whether to keep programming virtual or to bring the community back together in-person. We approached each class, event, and program on a case-by-case basis to meet the evolving needs of our community.

We continued to run our introductory Awareness Classes and Laying Tracks workshop series virtually throughout the season and were happy to see that the demand remained steady from last year. We moved the Backcountry Basics, an interactive education tool developed last season, to a permanent home on our website. The Northwest Snow and Avalanche Workshop (NSAW) and Women's Professional Workshop were both run virtually and each allowed professionals from across the continent to connect.

It was a busy year for programming. We had four women complete the Women's Mentorship Program where they shadowed and helped instruct an AIARE Level 1 course. We had nine Youth Ambassadors learn to instruct beginner Avalanche Awareness Classes for their peers. Snow School was brought back under NWAC's oversight. We launched the BIPOC Avalanche Awareness Instructor Training program and brought nine new instructors on board to teach for us.

TRAILHEAD OUTREACH:

We ran a record number of Trailhead Outreach events last season with the help of a very dedicated group of volunteers. We planned 35 events and successfully ran 27 at seven popular trailheads: Paradise Mt Rainier, Stevens Pass, Alpental, Commonwealth, Gold Creek, Mt Hood, and Mt Baker. We continued many of the COVID-19 safety protocols we introduced last season including virtual training for volunteers, QR code signs linking to the virtual user survey, and providing sanitation equipment. We also implemented vaccine card checks for volunteers. This program was supported by 48 volunteers that were able to interact with almost 5,000 backcountry users. We look forward to growing and evolving this program to gain a better understanding of our backcountry community next season.

WOMEN'S PROFESSIONAL PROGRAMMING

Our Women's Mentorship Program ran for the third year in a row with the aim of providing women educational opportunities, mentorship, and professional connections for those seeking careers in the outdoor and avalanche industry. This season four women completed the program. Similarly, we ran our second annual Women's Professional Workshop, with over 100 participants from all over North America. This virtual conference aims to connect women just starting their careers in the avalanche industry with those who have had decades of experience. Its success is due to enthusiastic information sharing and a willingness to spend the extra time to become a mentor or "friendtor" to those needing support.

BIPOC AWARENESS INSTRUCTOR PROGRAM

This was an inaugural year for NWAC's BIPOC Awareness Instructor Training Program. This program was designed to address racial disparity in the snow and avalanche profession and lower barriers of entry to work in the industry. Through this train-the-trainer approach, we aimed to increase diversity within NWAC's Awareness Instructor pool. We found that there was a large demand for this type of programming and received nearly 100 applicants. Nine participants completed the program and began teaching Avalanche Awareness courses this season.

YOUTH AMBASSADOR PROGRAM

This season was our first time incorporating our Youth Ambassador program with our Avalanche Awareness curriculum. We brought on nine Youth Ambassadors and trained each of them to present an introductory 90-minute Avalanche Awareness class. This program spanned five virtual sessions, one in-person classroom session, and one field day. Topics ranged from basic avalanche safety to how to effectively present information. As a final piece to the program, ambassadors were asked to present an Avalanche Awareness class to their peers at school or in their communities.

SNOW SCHOOL

Snow School returned to NWAC's jurisdiction this season in partnership with Mt Baker Ski Area and Western Washington University. This youth education program brought 280 students from the Bellingham area up to Mt Baker for some hands-on learning in the snow. The field trip and pre-trip curriculum covered topics ranging from watershed ecology to avalanche safety.

MEDIA OUTREACH

Our media outreach continues to evolve each season. This year we focused more on email communications and increasing the frequency of our social media posts. NWAC's media focuses on highlighting our forecasters in the field, sharing snowpack conditions, education opportunities, and outreach events. This season, we released two longer form videos focused on a conditions outlook for the weekend. We hope to continue to integrate more video content into our media platforms.

BACKCOUNTRY BULLETIN:

The Backcountry Bulletin continues to be one of our most viewed pieces of media outreach. Each Friday throughout the season, our community gets an update on NWAC, snowpack conditions, a weather outlook, community events, and education. This season we sent out 32 Backcountry Bulletin emails. Additionally, we saw an increase in our email open rates and subscribers. To subscribe to the Backcountry Bulletin please go to our website.

SOCIAL MEDIA:

NWAC's social media is a key way we connect with our community. This season we leveraged our social media for fundraising efforts and to communicate our events and outreach. On Facebook and Instagram, our forecasters share regular updates from the field that allow us to get the information to backcountry users quicker and more efficiently. They posted 80 updates this season. We continue to receive positive feedback from our community regarding these updates.

MEMBERSHIP

NWAC's membership community continues to grow each year. This season we had 3,931 members a 36% increase from last year. We evolved our membership program to be more engaging this year through improving our gifts and creating a monthly membership email. Each month our members received an update from NWAC highlighting blogs, education resources, and member only discounts and benefits. We grew our ability to offer gifted memberships this year. With a total of 78 gifted memberships given primarily during the holiday season. In addition to gifted memberships, we ran a new free membership program for all users that took an AIARE Level 1 course this season. In partnership with local guide services, we were able to give out 391 free memberships. This program aims to engage users that are furthering their avalanche education and keep them connected to our community, events, and education.

SNOWBASH

VIRTUAL RAFFLE + SILENT AUCTION

EVENTS

Coming off of last year's success with online events, we had all the tools and experience we needed to go into a second season of virtual programming. In the fall, both Snowbash and NSAW remained virtual. We anticipated some drop off in attendance as people generally grew tired of meeting online, but we were surprised again by the engagement of our community. We continue to value virtual programming for its ability to expand geographic reach and for its ease of use. We are looking forward to bringing back in-person events next season and adapting programming to be a hybrid between online and in-person.

SNOWBASH

Sticking with the same format as last year's successful event, Snowbash was virtual for a second season. We ran a two-week virtual fundraiser to kick-off the 2021/2022 season. Although we are unable to celebrate the start of another season in person, events like Snowbash continue to be significant fundraiser for NWAC. We are so thankful for the support we received from the community and we're really looking forward to connecting in person next season.

NSAW

This season NSAW was held virtually again and took place over the course of three evenings in October. We had over 500 professionals join us from across the continent for presentations and discussion. Our community continued to enjoy the virtual aspect of the workshop so we will run a hybrid event next season to allow people to join from out of town or revisit recorded presentations after the workshop.

PROFESSIONAL WORKSHOP

After two seasons of interacting online, we were excited to host our first in-person event since 2020. We invited snow and avalanche professionals from across the Northwest to join us in North Bend for networking, dinner, and a season wrap-up from Don Sharaf. It was heartening to be back together face-to-face and we're even more excited for larger in-person events next season with the rest of our community.

DEI UPDATE

In 2020 NWAC published a statement on Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI). In this statement, we identified seven key areas within our organization where we would focus our efforts in order to contribute toward anti-racist work in the outdoor community. In the 2020/21 annual report, we provided an update on the tactical work we were doing internally and externally within these seven areas. For 2021/22, we want to provide a more detailed account of the work we have accomplished and address the work that still needs to be done. In the coming weeks, we will be publishing a dedicated DEI Report to highlight some of the work we have done in each of our seven key areas while also providing you with a roadmap for our upcoming year.

We understand that this work is ongoing and the progress made at NWAC is a small part of a much larger picture. We also understand and acknowledge that some of this work may not seem hugely impactful. Being part of the snow and avalanche space, we understand how niche this community can feel for a number of different reasons. However, we feel strongly that it is everyone's responsibility to engage in this work no matter what space they occupy. As we strive to create a more equitable and inclusive outdoor community, mistakes have been made. We'd like to thank our partners, teachers, and community for allowing us to make those mistakes. Because of your commitment to us and understanding, we've also been able to make so much progress.

As always, we approach this work with humility and the acknowledgment that we will continue to listen, learn, and push ourselves to contribute meaningfully to our community.

THANK YOU TO CLEM'S ENUMCLAW POWERSPORTS!

We would like to thank Clem's Enumclaw Powersports for supporting NWAC for another season. With these snowmobiles our team had the opportunity to travel to terrain that is too far to ski in a workday. Our avalanche specialists were therefore able to reach an even greater amount of our forecasting zones this season. The snowmobiles from Clem's also allowed us to create in-roads and relationships with the motorized community; improved forecaster job satisfaction; and, most importantly, improve the quality and scope of our forecasts.

Thank you, Clem's!
