DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

This was NWAC's 49th season, and it was marked by significant uncertainty and change. In the fall, we faced major challenges related to the Forest Service's 1039 seasonal hiring freeze. We were unsure whether or not all forecast staff would return for the 24-25 season until just weeks before we began daily forecast operations. Thanks to a full press from many, both inside and outside the Forest Service, including from our organization, we successfully delivered our program as intended this season -- no small feat we can all share pride in. Unfortunately, the challenging environment did not relent this year. We are fortunate to have weathered big changes in the federal workforce over the second half of the winter, although many questions remain unanswered as we head into next season.

Weather-wise, the snowpack was hit or miss. Long dry stretches in January, a big warm-up and significant avalanche cycle in March, and plenty of thin coverage in between made for a tricky year in the mountains. In a season with fewer storms and fewer avalanches overall, we were reminded that it only takes one bad day—sadly, a snowmobiler lost their life in an avalanche near Harts Pass this spring.

Amidst everything, we also had a lot to be proud of. This was a year of growth in many ways. We brought two new forecasters onto the team—Payton Schiff and Josh Lipkowitz—and were excited to welcome back Nick “Rusty” Rustigian as Product Manager after several years away. We also said goodbye to Charlotte Guard after nine years with NWAC. Charlotte played a key role in education and tech, most recently leading the launch of the Avy App. We're grateful for all the passion and expertise she contributed to NWAC!

Across the organization, we saw strong support. More people submitted observations, signed up as members, volunteered their time, and showed up to events like Snowbash and NSAW. Our Trailhead Outreach program reached record numbers, and our education team continued to build on programs for youth and new instructors.

Looking ahead, next year marks NWAC's 50th season—a milestone we're proud to reach. It's a chance to reflect on where we've been and to make sure we're ready for what's next. Backcountry use continues to grow, while federal support remains uncertain. To keep pace—and to keep providing accurate forecasts, weather data, and outreach—we'll need your support more than ever.

We're looking forward to what the next 50 years bring—and grateful to have you with us.

SEASON SUMMARY

Heading into winter, there was considerable buzz surrounding the possibility of a La Niña winter. Often, this indicates the likelihood of colder and snowier conditions. Avalanche meteorologist, Robert Hahn, took a deep dive into our climate snow depth data, monitored in collaboration with the Washington State Climate Office, to see if this would indeed be the case. Interestingly, weak La Niña patterns, like the one expected, often result in near or even below-average snowpacks in the Cascades, which stands in stark contrast to moderate and strong La Niña winters. Robert describes this phenomenon in a blog post from the fall.

While winter weather outlooks can be fun to dream about, ultimately, “don’t count it ‘til it’s on the ground.” Indeed, this winter generally followed the pattern Robert’s research suggested. Higher freezing levels and lower-than-average precipitation resulted in thinner snowpacks for most locations. The exceptions seemed to be our West South and Mt Hood zones, where snow depths were closer to average. Even if individual storms brought moments of excitement or stellar travel, two events stand out: the prolonged January Drought and the March wet slab cycle.

Like much of the western US, January was very dry. Most of NWAC’s weather stations went 19 days without measurable precipitation. Avalanche danger decreased and remained Low for nearly two weeks straight. This is one of the longest stretches of low danger anyone at NWAC can remember. Travel in the forest was often described as a “frozen coral reef.” Not surprisingly, facets and surface hoar formed on many slopes. It would take these layers time to wake up, but they ultimately resulted in numerous persistent slab avalanches, particularly in the West South and East North zones. This layer was also responsible for our only avalanche fatality, when two snowmobilers were caught and carried in a very large avalanche near Harts Pass, WA, northwest of Mazama (East North zone). Unfortunately, one of them did not survive.

In a year that generally brought fewer and smaller avalanches, the most notable cycle of the season followed a March atmospheric river (AR). This wasn’t the heaviest or longest AR of the winter, but its potent combination of intense precipitation followed by a prolonged warm period resulted in numerous very large avalanches. Many of these slides released days after the rain event. And even deep into spring, backcountry travelers continued to navigate the massive piles of debris.

WEATHER STATION INNOVATION

Accurate weather forecasting remains at the heart of NWAC's avalanche forecasting efforts. By integrating detailed mountain weather predictions with in-depth snowpack analysis, our forecasters are able to craft comprehensive and timely avalanche forecasts. This year, our network of 53 automated weather stations once again proved indispensable, supplying critical real-time data that enhances both the precision and confidence of our forecasts. These observations not only inform our understanding of evolving weather patterns, but also serve as a benchmark to evaluate and improve the reliability of our forecasting models.

NWAC Weather Station Projects

1. Mount Baker

We reconfigured and updated snow depth sensors.

2. Newhalem

In partnership with our friends at WSDOT, we added a new station to our network above the town of Newhalem. This helped to fill a data hole in the West North zone.

3. White Chuck

We serviced this remote weather station and continued to monitor its progress as an experimental installation.

4. Stevens Pass

We worked with WSDOT and the ski area to install new snow depth sensors at the Schmidt Haus, Grace Lakes, and Brooks stations.

5. Alpentel

We reconfigured and updated snow depth sensors, and major construction necessitated working with partners to remove existing instrumentation and plan for the future of this site.

6. Camp Muir

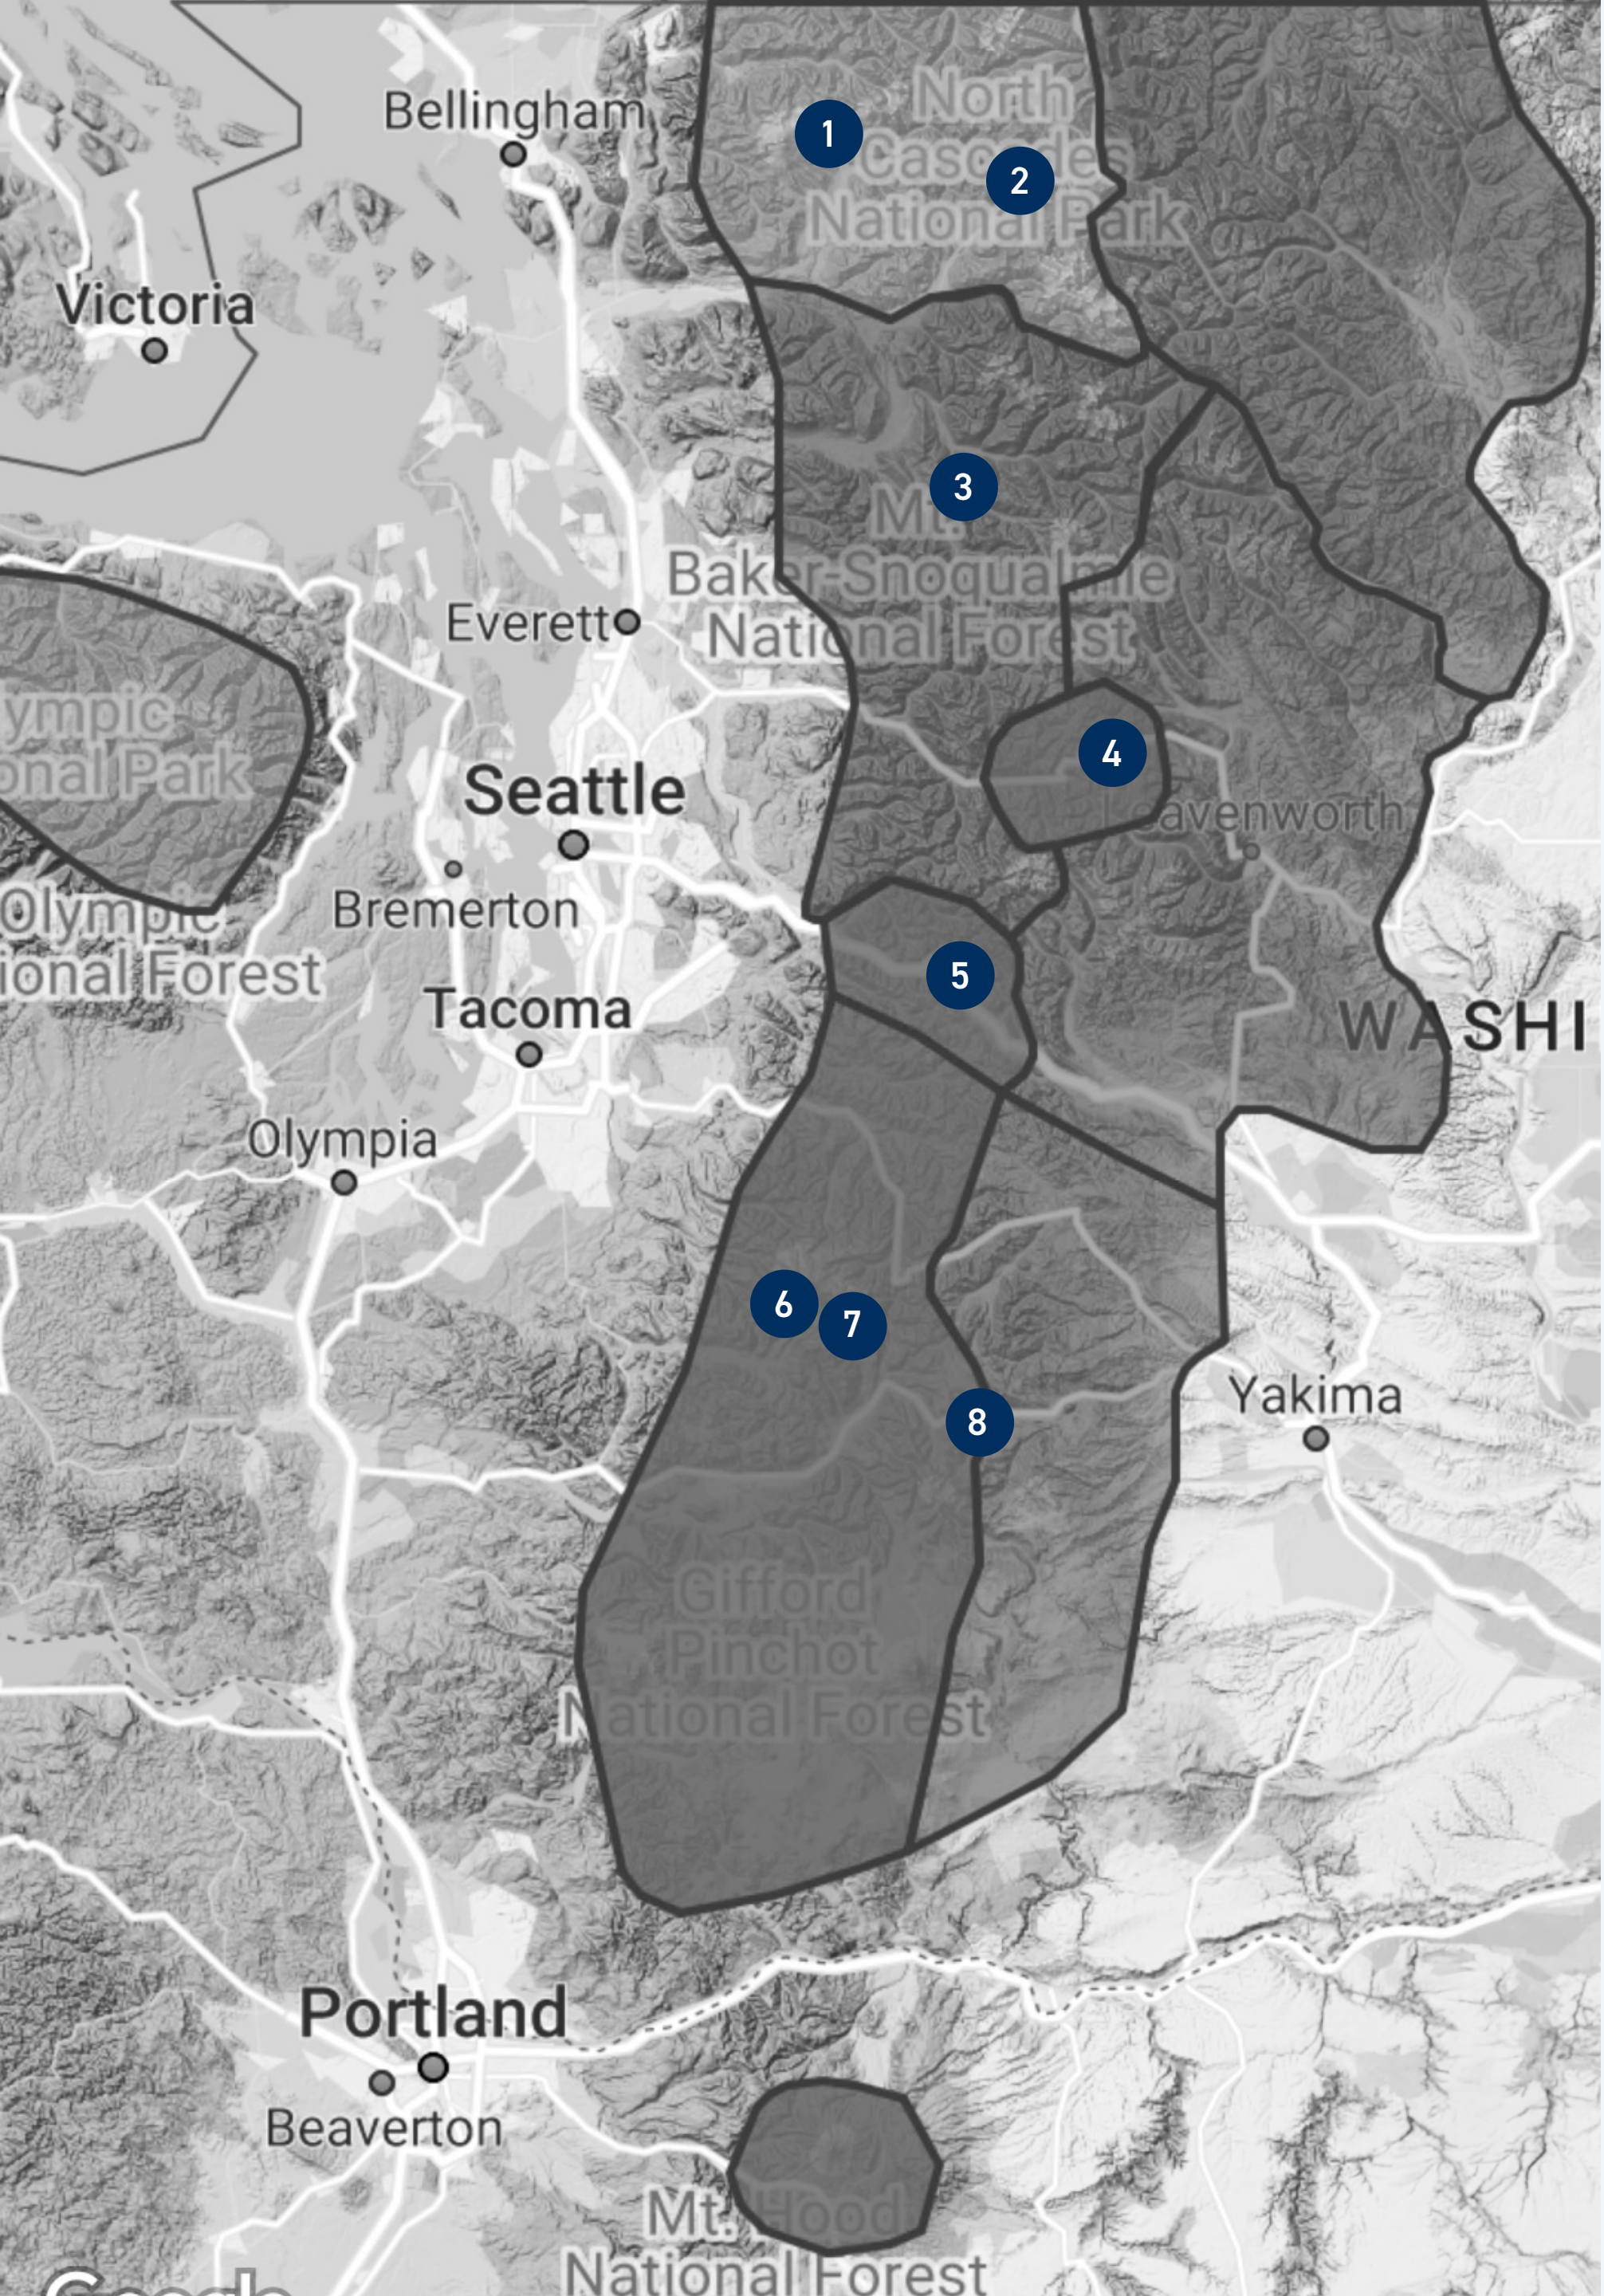

Major construction projects necessitated working with partners to remove existing instrumentation and plan for the future of this site.

7. Paradise

Similar to the Mount Baker and Alpentel weather stations, we made upgrades to snow depth sensors.

8. White Pass

The Pigtail wind site at White Pass has been completely removed and the precipitation site has been converted from AC power to solar until construction is completed later this season.

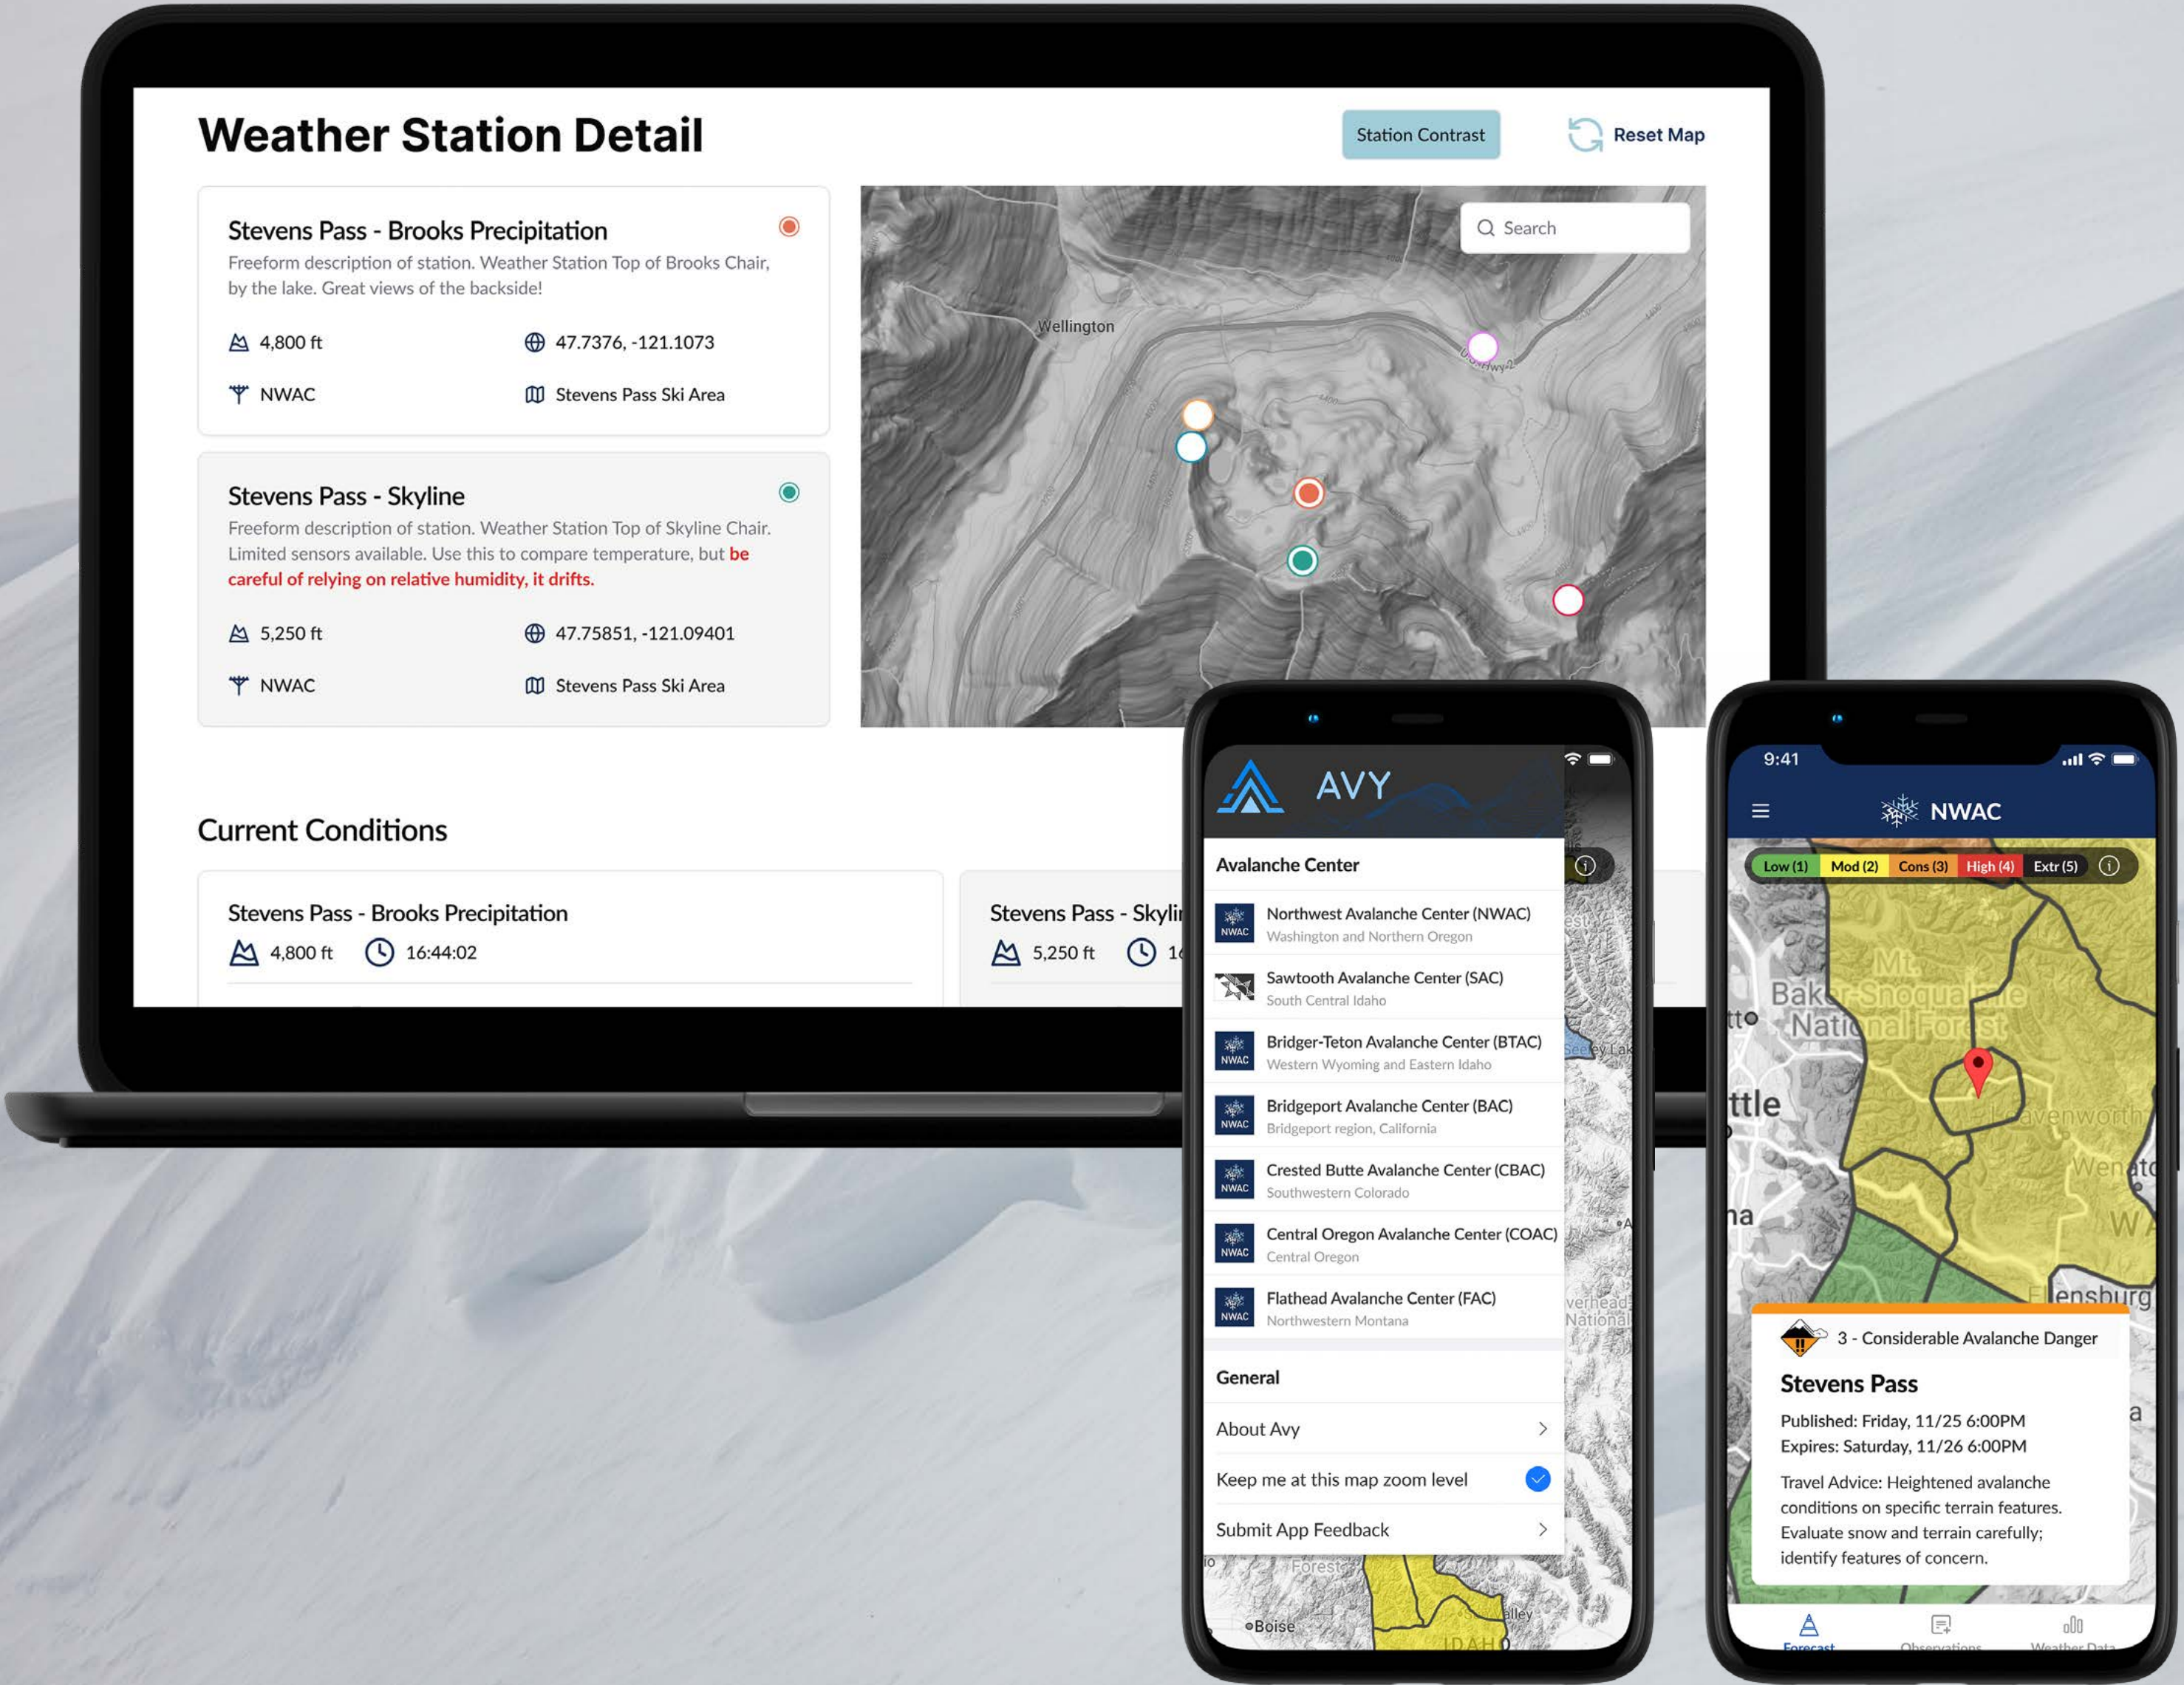

TECHNOLOGY

This season, NWAC's commitment to advancing avalanche safety through technology reached new heights. The Avy app now supports 10 avalanche centers and saw strong engagement from a growing community of over 30,000 active users. We're especially proud of the dedicated volunteers who contribute their time and expertise to improve Avy!

Looking ahead, we're actively developing new features for next season and working toward nationwide adoption by bringing more U.S. avalanche centers onto the platform. In addition, we have been working closely with the National, Sierra, and Sawtooth Avalanche Centers to build a multi-tenant website platform that will be available to all avalanche centers in the US. Each center will have its own site, but it will be built on the same back-end components. Avalanche centers that choose to use the platform will have access to a team of developers and designers to lean on for maintenance, new features, and best practices in user experience. The first version is ready for testing, with plans to launch in the fall.

In the images on this page, you can see some of our ideation on the new website layout and Avy format/features.

EDUCATION & OUTREACH

Education remains a cornerstone of NWAC's mission. In the 2024/25 season, we streamlined our offerings to concentrate on the quality and impact of our core programs. This strategic focus allowed us to increase both the number of program days and the total participants served—surpassing the reach of the previous season. All offerings continued to be free or low-cost, ensuring broad accessibility. Our programs maintained a wide geographic footprint and engaged a diverse audience, including first-time and experienced backcountry travelers, youth, motorized users, and professionals. Each class and event welcomed new members into our community and delivered critical knowledge to foster a safer backcountry environment.

Avalanche Awareness Classes

Our Avalanche Awareness program remained strong in the 2024/25 season, with 123 classes conducted and over 3,446 class attendees. We maintained strong geographic reach, with classes held in nine of our 10 forecast zones. In addition to many returning hosts, we worked with a number of new hosts this year, highlighting the continued demand for this program. We also invested in a new Salesforce process over the summer to streamline the awareness class process for hosts, participants, and instructors this season.

Youth Programs

At NWAC, we believe that building a safer future in the mountains starts with educating young adventurers. This season, we continued to bring avalanche awareness to youth across the region, offering tailored classes for school groups, scout troops, sports teams, and other youth organizations. For the second year in a row, we partnered with the Wenatchee School District to deliver hands-on avalanche rescue training to six school groups. New this season, we were thrilled to host an on-snow avalanche awareness clinic for the Stevens Pass Freeride Team—giving these young athletes practical tools to stay safe while exploring the backcountry.

Trailhead Outreach

The Trailhead Outreach Program continued to thrive this season. Over the course of the season, we hosted 30 events across nine of our ten forecasting zones, connecting directly with backcountry users where it matters most. This year, we expanded our reach by conducting outreach at motorized Sno-Parks to better connect with the snowmobile community. This program's success is a testament to the commitment of our incredible volunteers, whose time and energy make these meaningful trailhead interactions possible.

CONT'D

Awareness Instructor Program

In its fourth season, the Aspiring Awareness Instructor Program continued to offer mentorship and opportunity in the snow and avalanche industry. Designed to reduce barriers to entry and create a clear pathway to paid roles, this train-the-trainer cohort program equips participants to lead introductory avalanche awareness classes. This season, eight new instructors completed the training and joined NWAC's pool of Awareness Instructors—helping expand our educational reach while fostering a more inclusive backcountry community.

Snowmobile Program

NWAC is committed to growing and investing in our snowmobile-focused education and outreach efforts. New this season, we offered a monthly, virtual Avalanche Awareness class specifically for motorized users from December to March and we conducted three Trailhead Outreach events at motorized Sno-Parks. NWAC motorized instructors and forecasters also attended two large community events, engaging in outreach and teaching clinics on proper transceiver use.

Avalanche Awareness Snowshoe Walks

This year, NWAC ran 10 Avalanche Awareness Snowshoe Walks. We updated the curriculum to better meet participants' needs and continue to deliver this program in successful partnership with the U.S. Forest Service Snowshoe Program. Designed specifically for snowshoers, these walks provide critical, activity-specific avalanche awareness and safety education in an engaging field-based format.

Laying Tracks

This season, we continued our Laying Tracks virtual workshop series, delivering four focused sessions on key avalanche safety topics. Each workshop was designed to deepen understanding and support safer decision-making in the backcountry. We were excited to offer an enhanced experience this year, featuring updated curriculum and improved delivery to better engage and inform participants.

Professional Programs

In addition to public outreach and education, NWAC is committed to supporting the professional avalanche community. This season, we hosted three dedicated events for industry partners: the Pre-Season Avalanche Educator Session, the SAR Summit, and the new Post-Season Industry Gathering. Introduced this year, the Post-Season Gathering created a valuable space for reflection, connection, and shared learning at the close of the season. These events strengthen professional networks, promote consistency in messaging, and help advance avalanche safety across our region.

EVENTS

In 2024/25, we built on the momentum from previous seasons, and with an amazing amount of community support, hosted ten NWAC events and participated in 17 events hosted by other organizations in the PNW. We're always in the process of reimagining our NWAC events to ensure they reflect the evolving needs of our community and expanding our participation in events hosted by partner organizations. The connections made at events this season were both meaningful and energizing, offering opportunities to strengthen existing relationships and welcome many new faces into the NWAC community. We're deeply grateful for the enthusiasm, curiosity, and support that our volunteers and attendees brought to each event!

Snowbash

Snowbash once again kicked off the season with energy, excitement, and a strong sense of community. This year's event brought together over 400 winter enthusiasts for an evening of celebration and fundraising at evo Seattle. Thanks to the incredible support from our sponsors, volunteers, and guests, we raised nearly $35,000 in support of NWAC's mission. Snowbash has been a highlight of the season for many years, but we have something new in store for our season kickoff next season! Stay tuned for more details.

NSAW

NSAW 2024 brought together avalanche professionals, backcountry users, researchers, and educators for a full day of learning, connection, and conversation. Held at Cascadia College in Bothell once again, the workshop featured a compelling lineup of speakers who shared insights on human factors, decision-making, snow science, and the evolving challenges of backcountry travel. We replicated the all-new breakout session format from last year, where attendees selected breakout sessions that fit their interests and knowledge level, joining smaller groups (25-50 people) for interactive presentations. From case studies to cutting-edge research, the content reflected the complexity and depth of modern avalanche safety work.

This year's event drew a wide-ranging audience "from seasoned professionals to newer recreationists," demonstrating the continued relevance and impact of NSAW in fostering a more informed backcountry community. We're grateful to our speakers, sponsors, and attendees for making NSAW 2024 a success and helping us carry forward a culture of shared learning in avalanche safety.

Meet Your Forecaster

We held seven Meet Your Forecaster events across Washington and Oregon this season: North Bend, Bellingham, Leavenworth, Twisp, Yakima, Hood River, and Cle Elum. This event series is a great way to form personal connections, ask questions, and gain more insight into what forecasters do on a daily basis.

MEMBERSHIP

Members are the heart of NWAC—our community is NWAC. While we’re fortunate to have strong support from corporate sponsors, government partners, and industry allies, it’s individual donors who truly keep our work going. In fact, individual contributions make up over 50% of our annual budget. Without that grassroots support, daily avalanche forecasts simply wouldn’t be possible.

This season, we had 4,041 NWAC members, including 225 who signed up through a Level 1 Avalanche Course. We were thrilled to host another Supporter Celebration on May 29, 2025—an event we reintroduced last year to recognize the incredible people who make NWAC possible. It was a joy to gather with members, volunteers, instructors, and passionate supporters to celebrate the collective impact of our community.

Thank you for powering NWAC—we couldn’t do it without you.

VOLUNTEERS

This year, our dedicated volunteers played a pivotal role in powering everything from community outreach to major events and specialized initiatives. To celebrate their contributions, we continued the Volunteer Give Back Program. Participants who logged 12 or more volunteer hours received NWAC membership gear, while those who exceeded 30 hours qualified for a Level 1 or Level 2 avalanche course. This program has fostered a strong, committed volunteer base that helped drive our mission forward.

MEDIA OUTREACH

Social Media

Our social media channels continued to serve as a vital link between NWAC and the community this season. The forecast team shared frequent, real-time observations from the field, offering timely updates on mountain conditions alongside expert insights. Building on last year’s momentum, we expanded our video content to give followers a more in-depth look at our daily work in the mountains. Our goal was to bring our community closer to the forecasting process and help spread awareness about the changing conditions throughout the season.

Throughout the 2024/25 season, we published 60 Instagram posts of professional observations. These posts reached over 1,295,633 people across the NWAC Instagram. We published 54 Facebook posts of professional observations. The posts collectively reached over 474,791 people.

Backcountry Bulletin

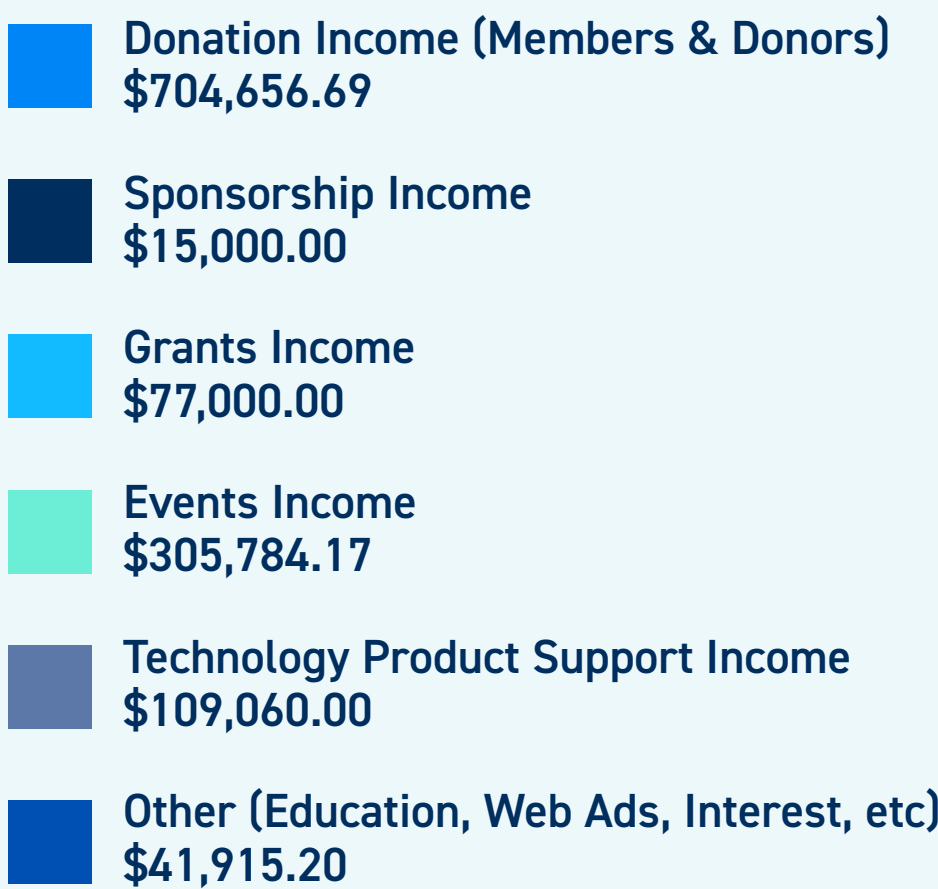

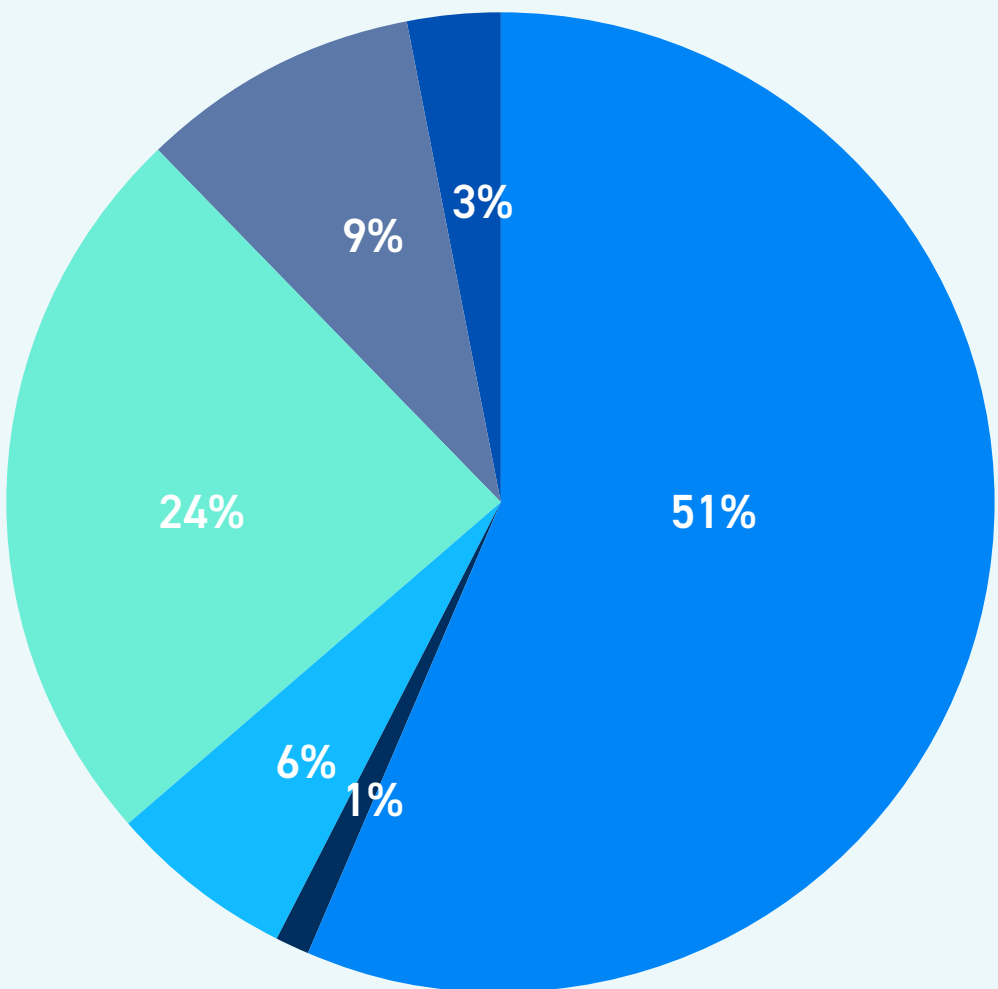

The Backcountry Bulletin remains one of our most viewed outreach pieces. Every Friday during the forecast season, we share the state of the snowpack, provide a mountain weather update, highlight an observation, and provide updates on our programming. Last season, we sent 24 bulletins. Our email list maintained an open rate above industry standard (46%). If you would like to subscribe to the Backcountry Bulletin, please visit our website.
